

COMPLETE VERBS (With Exercise)

A Verb is a word used to express/show an action, state, happening or occurrence (of something) in a sentence. The word 'verb' is derived from the Latin word 'verbum'. Types of verbs are given below:

Finite Verbs	Non-finite Verbs
Main Verb (Action Verb)	Infinitive
Helping Verb	Gerund
Linking Verb	Participle
Transitive Verb (Action Verb)
Intransitive Verb (Action Verb)
Causative Verb

Finite Verbs

In English grammar, a finite verb is a form of the verb that shows some kind of agreement with the subject of a sentence and is marked for tense. Non-finite verbs are not marked for tense and they do not show any kind of agreement with the subject of a sentence.

Finite verb forms show tense, person and number (I go, she goes, we went, etc.). Finite verbs change their forms (go, goes, went, are, were, etc.) when there is a change in the number or person of the subject (singular/plural). Finite verbs also have different forms in different tenses.

Ex- Does your brother know my father? (know = finite)

Ex- She was waiting in the room before he came in. (was waiting, came = finite)

Ex- Aren't you a bit late? (Aren't = finite)

Ex- The night before he had to leave, they sat on the small sofa in the living-room and looked at old family photos. (had, sat, looked = finite)

The types of the finite verbs are given below:

1. Main verb (action verb)
2. Helping verb
3. Linking verb
4. Transitive verb (action verb)
5. Intransitive verb (action verb)
6. Causative Verb

1. Main Verbs (Action Verbs): Main verbs or action verbs are used to express action; something that an animal, a person or a thing does.

Ex- I'm going home. (going = main verb)

Ex- He does not want to go to school today. (want = main verb)

Ex- I have a pen/car/book. (have = main verb)

Ex- I have had a car. (had = main verb)

Ex- You should go and meet her. (go, meet = main verbs)

Ex- He is gone but he will come again after some time. (gone, come = main verbs)

Ex- People like watching superhero movies in theaters. (like = main verb)

Ex- Where did you find this watch? (find = main verb)

2. Helping Verbs: As the name suggests, helping verbs help or support the main verb.

Ex- She is going to meet her grandmother. (is = helping verb; going = main verb)

Ex- Where are you coming from? (are = helping verb; coming = main verb)

Ex- He does not want to go there. (does = helping verb; want = main verb)

Ex- My mother will come tomorrow. (will = helping verb; come = main verb)

Ex- I have had a car. (have = helping verb; had = main verb)

Ex- He was a good man. (was = helping verb)

Ex- Where did you find this watch? (did = helping verb; find = main verb)

3. Linking Verbs (State of Being Verbs): State of Being verbs state that something 'is'. State of being verbs are also known as linking verbs. Linking verbs explain a link between the subject of the sentence and a noun or adjective being linked to it.

Ex- Diamond is the hardest substance. (is = linking verb)

Ex- The flowers are bright. (are = linking verb)

Ex- It is good. (is = linking verb)

Ex- It sounds nice. (sounds = linking verb)

Ex- He is excited. (is = linking verb)

Note: The words: am, is, are, was, and were, belong to the verb 'be'.

4. Transitive Verbs (Action Verbs): A transitive verb expresses an action directed towards a person, place or thing. The action expressed by a transitive verb passes from the doer (subject) to the receiver (object) of the action. Words that receive the action of a transitive verb are called objects.

Ex- The teacher made the question paper. (made = transitive verb)

Ex- Fatima cut the cake. (cut = transitive verb)

Ex- He gave his laptop to his sister. (gave = transitive verb)

Ex- Can you bring this notebook? (bring = transitive verb)

Ex- The committee will raise money for the new project. (raise = transitive verb)

A transitive verb needs a direct object to complete its meaning. We can see that the words in green colour 'the question paper' and 'the cake' complete the sense of the sentence or work as objects. The two sentences would not make complete sense without the objects.

Ex- The teacher made what? (the question paper)

Ex- Fatima cut what? (the cake)

Ex- He gave what? (his laptop)

Ex- Can you bring what? (this notebook)

Ex- The committee will raise what? (money for the new project)

A transitive verb can take more than one object.

Ex- He gave a laptop to his sister. (He gave what? (a laptop). Here, 'laptop' is direct object and 'his sister' is indirect object.)

Ex- She bought a shirt for him. (She bought what? (a shirt). Here, 'shirt' is direct object and 'him' is indirect object.)

Ex- I told her a story. (I told what? (a story). Here, 'story' is direct object and 'her' is indirect object)

However, there's another way to say the same thing:

Ex- He gave his sister a laptop.

Ex- She bought him a shirt.

Ex- I told a story to her.

5. Intransitive Verbs (action verbs): A verb which does not need an object, to make complete sense is called an intransitive verb. An intransitive verb expresses action (or tells something about the subject) without the action passing to a receiver or object. It can stand alone in the predicate because its meaning is complete.

Ex- We talked/laughed. (talk/laugh = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- Her phone rang. (rang = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- My teacher listens. (listen = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- They jumped. (jumped = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- It's raining. (raining = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- A light was shining. (shining = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Ex- The dog ran. (ran = intransitive verb; no object required and makes complete sense)

Note: Some verbs are both transitive and intransitive like, 'walk', 'drive', 'read', and 'understand', etc.

Ex- We walked. (walk = intransitive)

Ex- We walked the dog. (walk = transitive)

Ex- I understand. (understand = intransitive)

Ex- I understand you/your feelings. (understand = transitive)

Ex- She reads. (read = intransitive)

Ex- She reads three books every week. (read = transitive)

Ex- She drives. (drive = intransitive)

Ex- She drives a long truck. (drive = transitive)

6. Causative Verbs: The causative verbs are used to indicate that one person causes another person to do something for the first person. One can cause somebody to do something for him/her by asking, paying, requesting, or forcing the other person. The English verbs, 'let', 'make', 'have', 'get', and 'help' are called causative verbs because they cause something else to happen.

(a). Let = To Allow/Permit Something to Happen

Grammatical structure: Let+ Person/thing + Verb (base form). The past tense of the verb 'let' is also 'let'.

Ex- Let him go.

Ex- Let him do it.

Ex- Let him come.

Ex- I don't let my kids watch violent movies.

Ex- Our boss doesn't let us eat lunch at our desks, we have to eat outside.

Ex- Her father won't let her adopt a puppy because he's allergic to dogs.
Ex- Oops! I wasn't paying attention while cooking, and I let the food burn.

Note: The verbs 'allow' and 'permit' are more formal ways to say 'let'. However, with 'allow' and 'permit', we use 'to + verb' after these verbs.

Ex- I don't allow my kids to watch violent movies.
Ex- Our boss doesn't permit us to eat lunch at our desks.

(b). Make = To Force/compel or Require Someone to Do Something

Grammatical structure: Make+ Person+ Verb (base form)

Ex- He made me do it. (I didn't do it, I was made (forced) to do it.)
Ex- I didn't want to watch the movie but he made me watch it.
Ex- His parents made him pay for it.
Ex- The teacher made all the students rewrite their papers.

When we use the verb 'make' in active voice sentences, then the structure of the sentence becomes: make + person + verb (base form). And passive voice structure becomes: helping verb + made + person + to + base form of the verb

Ex- He made me do it. (active voice)
Ex- I was made to do it (by him). (passive voice)
Ex- He made me to do it. (incorrect)
Ex- I was made do it. (incorrect)
Ex- She made her children do their homework before going to bed.
Ex- Her children were made to do their homework before going to bed.

Note: When using the verbs 'force' and 'require', we must use 'to + verb' after these verbs.

Ex- The school requires the students to wear uniforms.
Ex- The hijacker forced the pilots to take the plane in a different direction.

(c). Have = To Give Someone Else the Responsibility of Doing Something

Grammatical structure:

- (a) Have + Person + Verb (base form)
- (b) Have + Thing + Past Participle of the Verb (v3)

Ex- I'll have my assistant call you to reschedule the appointment.
Ex- The businessman had his secretary make copies of the report.
Ex- I'm going to have my phone fixed tomorrow.
Ex- I'm going to have my hair cut tomorrow.
Ex- We'll have our house painted next week.
Ex- My washing machine is broken, I need to have it repaired.
Ex- I had my car repaired last week.
Ex- Bob had his teeth whitened, his smile looks great!

Note: In informal speech, we often use 'get' in these cases:

Ex- I'm going to get my hair cut tomorrow.

Ex- We'll get our house painted this weekend.

Ex- Bob got his teeth whitened, his smile looks great!

Ex- My washing machine is broken, I need to get it repaired.

(d). Get = To Convince/encourage Someone to Do Something

Grammatical structure:

(a) Get + Person + To + Verb

(b) Get + Thing + Past Participle of the Verb (v3)

Ex- Get someone else to do it.

Ex- Get it done by tomorrow.

Ex- Get a mechanic to fix this car.

Ex- Get this car fixed.

Ex- My husband hates housework, I can never get him to wash the dishes!

Ex- She got a professional photographer to take photos at the event for free.

Ex- How can we get all the employees to arrive on time?

(e). Help = To Assist Someone in Doing Something

Grammatical structure:

(a) Help + Person + Verb (base form)

(b) Help + Person + To + Verb

After 'help', you can use 'v1' or 'To + v1', both ways are correct. In general, the form without 'to' is used more commonly. (British English uses 'to + v1' form after the verb 'help').

Ex- He helped me carry the boxes. (correct)

Ex- He helped me to carry the boxes. (correct)

Ex- He helped me in lifting the box. (correct, preposition 'in' is used here before the gerund 'lifting')

Ex- Reading before bed helps me relax. (correct)

Ex- Reading before bed helps me to relax. (correct)

Ex- Reading before bed helps me in relaxing my mood. (correct, preposition 'in' is used here before the gerund 'relaxing')

Non-finite Verbs

Just when we thought we had verbs figured out, we're brought face-to-face with a new animal called 'non-finite' verbs. These words look similar to verbs we've already been talking about, but they act quite different from those other verbs.

Let's read the following sentence carefully:

- i. I have given him money.
- ii. I like to give him money.

In the first sentence, the verb 'have given' has its subject 'I'. The verb 'have given' is limited by the number and person of its subject. Therefore, it's called a 'Finite Verb' (limited verb).

In the second sentence, 'like' (main verb) is a finite verb as it has its subject 'I'. But, the verb 'to give' has no separate subject and it's not limited by number and person. Therefore, it's called a 'Non-finite Verb' (not limited by anything).

By definition, a non-finite verb cannot serve as the main verb in an independent clause. The form of the verb that is not affected by the subject and the time (in a sentence) is called a non-finite verb. Non-finite verb forms do not show/express tense, person or number. Typically they are infinitive forms with and without to (e.g. 'to go', 'go'), '-ing' forms and '-ed' forms (e.g. 'going', 'gone'). There are three types of non-finite verbs: infinitive, gerund and participle.

Ex- I want to go there. (want = finite; to go = non-finite)

Ex- I want to be a doctor. (want = finite; to be = non-finite)

Ex- I like playing cricket. (like = finite; playing = non-finite)

Ex- She tiptoed around the house so as not to wake anyone. (tiptoed = finite; to wake = non-finite)

Ex- You need to paint the whole cupboard, starting from the bottom. (need = finite; to paint, starting = non-finite)

Now, have a look at the finite and non-finite verbs given below:

1. My brother 'wants' to be a doctor. ('wants' = finite; 'to be' = non-finite)
2. Sheela worked hard 'to pass' the test. (worked = finite; to pass = non-finite)
3. I 'couldn't solve' the problem. (couldn't solve = finite)
4. 'To err' is human. (to err = non-finite; is = finite)
5. Your duty is to cross the river without 'getting' noticed. (is = finite; to cross = non-finite; getting = non-finite)
6. The doctor 'is attending' to the injured people. (is attending = finite)
7. She 'opened' the door. (opened = finite)
8. The students 'were asked' to submit their assignments by Friday. (were asked = finite; to submit = non-finite)
9. The teacher 'encouraged' the students to work hard. (encouraged = finite; to work = non-finite)
10. The dog 'wagged' its tail to show its happiness. (wagged = finite; to show = non-finite)

1. Infinitive:

To be or not to be, that is the question. - Hamlet (Shakespeare)

Yes! 'To + v1' is called 'infinitive'. When we only have 'v1' (without 'to'), then it's called a bare infinitive. 'Bare' means without (something). So, 'to be', 'to do', 'to go', 'to have', 'to play', 'to complete', are infinitive forms. An infinitive is a non-finite verb. In other words, infinitives cannot be the main verb in a sentence.

Examples of infinitive forms:

- i. Present infinitive = to work, to do, to go, to sleep, to read, to teach
- ii. Present infinitive passive = to be worked, to be done, to be gone, to be taught
- iii. Present continuous infinitive = to be working, to be doing
- iv. Perfect infinitive = to have worked, to have done
- v. Perfect infinitive passive = to have been done, to have been worked, to have been taught
- vi. Perfect continuous infinitive = to have been working, to have been doing

- i. He comes here to study. (Present infinitive)
- ii. Everyone wants to be admired. (Passive voice of present infinitive)
- iii. Ravi admitted to have abused him. (Perfect infinitive)
- iv. Ravi admitted to have been arrested last month. (Passive voice of perfect infinitive)
- v. She seems to be running out of money. (Continuous infinitive)
- vi. Everyone wants to be popular. (Present infinitive)
- vii. To err is human. (Present infinitive)

Uses of the infinitive:

(a) The infinitive can be used alone or as part of an infinitive phrase:

- Ex- We began to walk.
Ex- We began to walk down the road.
Ex- To dance is his only goal.
Ex- To dance beneath the stars with her is his only goal.

(b) The infinitive can be the subject of a sentence:

- Ex- To steal is wrong.
Ex- To know her is to love her.
Ex- To save money now seems impossible.
Ex- To understand space, that is our aim now.
Ex- To waste your money is foolish.

(c) The infinitive can be the object of a verb or part of the object of a verb:

- Ex- He wants to pay.
Ex- He wants me to pay.
Ex- She agreed to pay.
Ex- She promised to wait.
Ex- The tenants refused to leave.

(d) 'Be + infinitive' is used to express command, orders, instructions or convey plans:

- Ex- You are to stay here. (It's an order/command/instruction and you need to stay here, do not leave.)
Ex- No one is to leave this building without the permission of the police. (No one must leave)

Ex- He is to stay here till we return. (He must stay here)

Ex- She is to be married next month. (future plan)

Ex- I am to go. (It is extremely important for me to go.)

Ex- He was to go. (present infinitive)

Ex- He was to have gone. (perfect infinitive)

Ex- The PM is to make a statement tomorrow.

Note: This construction is very much used in newspapers. In newspaper headlines, the verb 'be' (is/am/are/was/were) is often omitted to save space. And the headline becomes: PM to make statement tomorrow.

(e) 'Be about + infinitive' is used to denote/express the immediate future (of present or past):

Ex- The show is about to start. (The show is just going to start or on the point of starting)

Ex- He is about to leave. (on the point of leaving)

Ex- He was about to make a film when he died. (immediate future of the past)

Ex- She was just about to dive when we saw the shark.

Ex- The flight is about to land (any minute).

(f) The use of 'Verb + how/what/when/where/which/why + infinitive':

The verbs most frequently used in this way are, 'ask', 'decide', 'know', 'think', 'learn', 'forget', 'remember', 'discover', 'find out' etc.

Ex- He discovered how to open a box.

Ex- My kids don't know how to swim.

Ex- She couldn't think what to say.

Ex- I have found out where to buy a good food in this town.

Ex- I didn't know when to switch the machine off.

Ex- He did not know to solve this problem. (incorrect)

Ex- He did not know how to solve this problem. (correct)

Ex- Students usually ask me to start their preparation. (incorrect)

Ex- Students usually ask me when/how to start their preparation. (correct)

(g) 'Whether + infinitive' can be used similarly after 'want to know', 'wonder', etc.:

Ex- I wondered whether to write or phone.

Ex- He seemed undecided whether to go or stay.

Ex- I'm wondering whether to have the fish or the beef.

(h) The most useful verbs which can be followed by infinitive are:

Agree	Consent	Hope	Remember
Aim	Decide	Learn	Resolve
Appear	Decline	Manage	Seem
Arrange	Demand	Offer	Swear
Ask	Determine	Plan	Tend
Attempt	Endeavour	Prepare	Threaten
Begin	Fail	Pretend	Trouble (negative)

Bother	Forget	Proceed	Try (attempt)
Care (negative)	Guarantee	Promise	Intend
Choose	Happen	Prove	Volunteer
Claim	Hesitate	Refuse	Vow

Some examples of the given verbs with infinitive are given below:

She agreed to do the film.	I forgot to tell you about her speech.
She still aim to do it.	It happens to be true sometimes.
She arranged to stay with her cousin in Delhi.	He hesitated to tell me her problems.
He appears to have lost his keys again.	I hope to begin college this year.
She asked to leave her alone.	I'm learning to do it in a new way.
He attempted to access the information.	The prisoner managed to escape .
He began to talk after some time.	She is all prepared to go there.
He didn't bother/trouble to come and see us.	He pretended to be angry.
I chose to stay with them.	She refused to come to the party.
He decided to go there.	It doesn't seem to be true at all.
She is determined to go there alone.	I'm still trying to fix this phone.
I failed to get enough money for the project.	I vowed to do more of the cooking myself.

(i) The following phrases can also be followed by an infinitive:

Be about	Make up one's mind (decide)
Be able + afford	Occur + to + object
Do one's best	Set out
Do what you can	Take the trouble
Make an/every effort	Turn out (prove to be)

Some examples of the given phrases with infinitive are given below:

The show is about to begin .	I made my mind to go there and talk to him.
Now, I'm able to do it without any help.	It didn't occur to me to ask him for the proof.
I did my best to get this film released.	She was all set out to go to Mumbai.
I did what I could to get him home.	We should take the trouble to find him out.
She made every effort to make it beautiful.	It turned out to be stranger than we had thought.

(j) The usage of 'verb + object + infinitive':

Advise	Forbid	Make	Show how
--------	--------	------	----------

Allow	Force	Oblige	Teach/teach how
Bribe	Hear	Order	Tell/tell how
Command	Implore	Permit	Tempt
Compel	Induce	Persuade	Train
Enable	Instruct	Remind	Urge
Encourage	Invite	Request	Warn

(Note: 'Advise', 'Allow' and 'Permit' can also be used with gerunds.)

Examples of 'verb + object + infinitive':

- Ex- These glasses will enable you to see in the dark.
- Ex- She encouraged me to try again.
- Ex- They forbade her to leave the house.
- Ex- She was forbidden to leave the house. (passive/more usual)
- Ex- Nothing would induce me to do business with them.
- Ex- They persuaded us to go with them.
- Ex- They're training these dogs to sniff out drugs.
- Ex- He showed me how to change a fuse.
- Ex- She told me how to make a cake.
- Ex- I teach you how to swim.
- Ex- She taught me to read and write.

(k) The use of the bare infinitive (infinitive without 'to') after some verbs and expressions:

After 'make', 'let', 'bid', 'know', 'help', 'watch', 'see', we use bare infinitive (only in active voice sentences, 'let' is an exception here, we use bare infinitive after 'let' both in active voice and in passive voice).

- Ex- She made me do it. (correct/active voice)
- Ex- She made me to do it. (incorrect/active voice)
- Ex- I was made to do it (by her). (correct/passive voice)
- Ex- I was made do it (by her). (incorrect/passive voice)
- Ex- With his hilarious jokes, she made everyone to laugh. (incorrect)
- Ex- With his hilarious jokes, she made everyone laugh. (correct)
- Ex- He let me go. (correct/active voice/past simple)
- Ex- I was let go (by him). (correct/passive voice/past simple)

Note: In passive voice we use 'was/were + v3'. All the forms of the verb 'let' are the same, and we use the bare infinitive after 'let'.

(l) The following phrases are also used with bare infinitive (infinitive without 'to'): 'Need not', 'Dare not', 'Would rather', 'Rather than', 'Had better'.

'Would rather' is used to talk about preferring one thing to another.

- Ex- I would rather stay at home than go to a movie.
- Ex- I would rather leave. (I would like to leave.)
- Ex- I'd rather not go out tonight.
- Ex- I'd rather die than apologize to him.

Ex- I'd rather not talk about it, okay?

'Had better' is used to give advice about what someone should do, or to say what you should do or need to do or used to threaten someone. It is used to refer to the present or the future.

Ex- You had better go from here.

Ex- You had better not tell him. (it's not a good idea to tell him)

Ex- I'd better go and get ready.

Ex- I'd better not go out tonight, I'm really tired.

Ex- You'd better keep your mouth shut about this. (threatening someone)

'Rather than' is used for saying that one thing is preferred to another or happens instead of another.

Ex- She decided to quit her job rather than to accept the new rules. (incorrect)

Ex- Ex- She decided to quit her job rather than accept the new rules. (correct)

Ex- Rather than to go straight on to university why not get some work experience first? (incorrect)

Ex- Ex- Rather than go straight on to university why not get some work experience first? (correct)

Ex- Doug chose to quit rather than to admit that he'd made a mistake. (incorrect)

Ex- Doug chose to quit rather than admit that he'd made a mistake. (correct)

"Needn't" and "Dare not" also take bare infinitives in the negative and interrogative sentences only when they're used as auxiliaries. "Needn't" is the contraction of 'need not'.

Ex- You need to work hard. (Affirmative sentence, 'need' is main verb not auxiliary verb)

Ex- You don't need to work hard. (Negative sentence, 'need' is a main verb not auxiliary verb)

Ex- You need not work hard. (Negative sentence, 'need' is an auxiliary verb here)

Ex- Do you need to work here? (Interrogative, 'need' is a main verb not auxiliary verb)

Ex- Need he work there? (Interrogative, 'need' is an auxiliary verb)

Ex- You needn't to go there alone. (incorrect, 'needn't' is used here as an auxiliary)

Ex- You needn't go there alone. (correct, 'needn't' is used here as an auxiliary)

Ex- You don't need to go there alone. (correct, 'need' is used here as a main verb)

Ex- We needn't to take coats with us. (incorrect, 'needn't' is used here as an auxiliary)

Ex- We needn't take coats with us. (correct, 'needn't' is used here as an auxiliary)

Ex- We don't need to take coats with us. (correct, 'need' is used here as a main verb)

Ex- He doesn't dare to speak about it. (correct, 'dare' is used here as a main verb)

Ex- He dare not to speak about it. (incorrect, 'dare' is used here as an auxiliary)

Ex- He dare not speak about it. (correct, 'dare' is used here as an auxiliary)

(m) Bare infinitive is used with: 'do nothing/everything/anything + but/except', 'than', 'and', 'or', 'as'.

Ex- He did nothing but play all the time. (correct)

Ex- He did nothing but to play all the time. (incorrect)

Ex- The kid did nothing but cry. (correct)

Ex- He does nothing but complain. (correct)

(n) The continuous infinitive (to be + present participle):

We also use (according to our requirement), continuous infinitive after these verbs: 'appear', 'happen', 'seem', 'pretend'.

- Ex- He seems to be following us. (It seems that he is following us.)
Ex- He appears/seems to be living in this area. (It appears/seems that he is living in this area.)
Ex- I happened to be standing next to him when he fell down. (It happened that I was standing next to him when he fell down.)
Ex- He pretended to be looking for a book. (He pretended that he was looking for a book.)

The continuous infinitive (to be + present participle) is also used after 'believe', 'consider', 'suppose', 'think', etc. in passive voice.

- Ex- He is believed to be living in Russia.
Ex- This machine is supposed to be working.
Ex- He is supposed to be telling the truth.

(o) The usage of the perfect infinitive (to have + past participle OR have + past participle):

- Ex- to have worked, to have spoken, to have missed, to have written, to have left, etc.

1. Perfect infinitives can have the same kind of meaning as perfect or past tenses.

- Ex- I am glad to have found a new job. (= I am glad that I have found a new job.)
Ex- She was sorry to have missed the concert. (= She was sorry that she had missed the concert.)
Ex- You seem to have annoyed him. (= It seems that you have annoyed him.)

2. The perfect infinitive is often used after the modal auxiliary verbs 'could', 'would', 'might', 'ought', 'should' and 'needn't' to talk about unreal situations.

- Ex- You should have asked my permission before going out. (but you didn't ask)
Ex- She should have discussed the matter with him. (but she didn't discuss the matter with him.)
Ex- I would have gone to university, if I had passed my exam. (but I didn't pass my exam.)
Ex- You shouldn't have provoked him. (but you provoked him.)
Ex- We needn't have waited for his approval. (but we waited for his approval.)

The structure 'modal auxiliary + perfect infinitive' is not always used to talk about unreal past situations. It can also be used to express certainty.

- Ex- She should have arrived by now.
Ex- They will have reached the station by now.

3. The present situation Vs a previous state:

These are some verbs where perfect infinitive can be used (if needed). In English, there are infinitive constructions with passive forms of verbs such as, 'assume', 'appear', 'admit', 'believe', 'consider', 'claim', 'confess', 'deny', 'know', 'recall', 'remember', 'recollect', 'report', 'say', 'suppose', 'suspect', 'think', 'understand', etc. These constructions are used with the present infinitive 'to be' when talking about the present situation or the perfect infinitive 'to have been' when we talk now about a previous state, action:

Ex- He is known to be a good doctor (We say, now, that he is still a good doctor, an active practitioner.)

Ex- He is known to have been a good doctor (We say, now, that he was, in the past, a good doctor; he may be now a retired person.)

Ex- He is a good doctor. (He is said to be a good doctor.)

Ex- He was a good doctor. (He is said to have been a good doctor.)

Ex- He used to be a good doctor. (He is said to have been a good doctor.)

Ex- He appears to have met her yesterday.

Ex- He denied to have met her yesterday.

Ex- I still remember to have met her last year.

Ex- He is suspected to have stolen her purse.

Note: (1) He denied having seen her yesterday. (correct)

(2) He denied meeting her yesterday. (correct - as 'meeting' is an earlier action)

Exercise: Finish the sentences using the perfect infinitive:

(A) He did not help her with luggage. He should

(B) Tom did not buy that cheap car. Tom should

(C) There are not any biscuits left. Someone must

(D) Did he buy a new car? I am not sure. He might

(E) He was a very good pilot. But he died in a plane-crash. He was believed

4. We use the perfect infinitive after verbs such as, 'claim', 'expect', 'hate', 'hope', 'like', 'love', 'prefer', 'pretend':

Ex- He pretended to have lost her number and so had been unable to contact her. (or He pretended that he had lost her number

Ex- I would prefer to have stayed at a small, family-run hotel than a big international chain. (I prefer to stay at small hotels, but I didn't.)

Ex- She claims to have met a number of famous people, but I don't believe her. (or She claims that she has met

The perfect infinitive can refer to something that will be completed at a point in the future:

Ex- We hope to have finished the building works by the end of March.

Ex- Before I turn 40, I want to have written a book.

5. Perfect infinitive with 'was/were' to express an unfulfilled plan or arrangement.

Ex- The house was to have been ready today. (But it isn't ready today)

You can see the difference between a perfect infinitive (to have + v3) and a present infinitive (to + v1):
The given below example is of the perfect infinitive (to have + v3 OR have + v3):

Ex- Mr. Bond was to have spoken at the meeting, but he had to cancel it because of his illness.

Now, this is the example of the present infinitive (to + v1):

Ex- Mr. Bond was to speak at the meeting. (it was arranged and he did)

Now, try to notice the difference of the meaning between these sentences after reading all these infinitives -

- (A) He was to go.
- (B) He was to have gone.
- (C) He would go.
- (D) He would have gone.
- (E) He would have gone by now.
- (F) He would have been found (guilty) by now.
- (G) You should go there.
- (H) You should have gone there.
- (I) It's good to have you here.
- (J) It's good to have been here.
- (K) It might happen.
- (L) It might have happened.
- (M) It might be true.
- (N) It might have been true.
- (O) You are to stay here.
- (P) You are going to stay here.
- (Q) You need to stay here.
- (R) He is to go.
- (S) I am to go.
- (T) I have to go.
- (U) I have had to go.
- (V) I had to go.
- (W) I had had to go.

2. Gerund (v1 + ing):

Gerund is a verb form which functions/acts as a noun therefore it is known as a verbal noun. It is formed by adding 'ing' with a verb.

Ex- I like playing cricket. (like = main verb (finite); playing = gerund (non-finite))

Ex- Reading is a good habit. (reading (gerund) used as the subject of the sentence)

Ex- I like reading. (reading (gerund) used as an object)

Ex- He is used to swimming. (to + gerund)

Ex- I don't believe in talking rubbish. (preposition + gerund)

Ex- He helped me in lifting the box. (preposition + gerund)

Note: Gerund and infinitive can be replaced, however, certain things/rules have to be followed while replacing gerunds and infinitives by each other.

Ex- I like to play cricket sometime. (particular time/mood, etc.) OR

Ex- I like playing cricket. (general/habitual statement)

Ex- It is easier to read French than to speak it. OR

Ex- Reading French is easier than speaking it.

Ex- To speak five languages is may be an advantage. OR

Ex- Speaking five languages is may be an advantage.

Gerunds can be used in the following ways:

- i. As a subject of a sentence: Reading science books is a tough work for some people.
- ii. As an object of a verb: She likes painting.
- iii. After prepositions: He was accused of stealing cars.
- iv. After certain verbs and phrases

(a) Gerund used as a subject of a sentence:

Ex- Smoking is injurious to health.

Ex- Singing gives me great pleasure.

Ex- Telling lies can get you into deep some troubles.

Ex- Collecting stamps is her hobby.

Ex- Exercising is good for your body.

(b) Gerund used as an object of a sentence:

Ex- She enjoys running (daily).

Ex- He denied stealing (the money).

Ex- They suggested staying for some more time.

Ex- He keeps talking (all the time).

Ex- I don't like watching movies.

(c) Gerund used after prepositions: Gerund is used after certain verbs/phrases that are followed by appropriate preposition instead of 'to'.

Ex- He is good at swimming.

Ex- She is fond of climbing.

Ex- I'm tired of being sorry.

A few more examples -

Ex- Let's go home, it's no use standing here in the cold. (Can't help something = used for saying that someone cannot stop themselves doing something)

Ex- She couldn't help laughing when she saw it.

Ex- I couldn't help thinking he was asking for a new car.

Ex- I can't stand waiting for buses.

Ex- He couldn't stand anyone feeling sorry for him. (Can't stand someone/something = used for saying that a person dislikes someone or something very much)

Ex- I prohibited him from going there.

Ex- She is bent on harming him.

Ex- She is confident of getting some success.

Ex- He insisted on paying money to his father.

(d) Verbs followed by gerund: Some verbs are given below.

Note: The starred verbs (*) represent that other constructions are also possible with these verbs or they can take 'that - clauses' with them.

(e) 'To + gerund': Gerund is used after these words/phrases:

'be used to', 'accustomed to', 'averse to', 'with a view to', 'look forward to', 'addicted to', 'devoted to', 'in addition to', 'object to', 'owing to', 'given to', 'taken to', 'disposed to', 'prone to', etc.

Ex- He was used to smoke. (incorrect)

Ex- He was used to smoking. (correct)

Ex- He used to smoke. (correct)

Ex- He was addicted to smoke. (incorrect)

Ex- He was addicted to smoking. (correct)

Ex- She was looking forward to meet her boss. (incorrect)

Ex- She was looking forward to meeting her boss. (correct)

Ex- We went there with a view to find out her, as she was lost. (incorrect)

Ex- We went there with a view to finding her, as she was lost. (correct)

Ex- She is not averse to taking chances. (correct)

(f) The noun or pronoun before a Gerund (verbal noun) should be in the possessive case:

Ex- I don't like him wasting time. (incorrect, 'wasting' is a gerund here)

Ex- I don't like his wasting time. (correct, 'wasting' is a gerund here)

Ex- She insisted on Rohan going with her. (incorrect, 'going' is a gerund here)

Ex- She insisted on Rohan's going with her. (correct, 'going' is a gerund here)

Ex- I don't like his talking nonsense. (correct, 'talking' is a gerund here)

Ex- I liked her discussing the subject with us. (correct, 'discussing' is a gerund here)

Now look at these examples carefully:

Ex- My mother doesn't like me playing cricket. (incorrect, 'playing' is a gerund here.)

Ex- My mother doesn't like my playing cricket. (correct, 'playing' is a gerund here.)

Ex- My mother doesn't like me, playing cricket. (correct, 'playing' is a participle here, which shows the ongoing activity. 'my mother doesn't like me' is a separate clause here.)

Ex- He saw me dancing. (correct, 'dancing' is a participle here, which shows the ongoing activity.)

Ex- He saw my dancing. (incorrect)

Ex- He saw my dance. (correct)

Ex- I watched him writing a film-script. (correct, 'writing' is a participle here, which shows the ongoing activity. It means: I watched him when he was writing a film-script.)

Ex- I saw him wasting time. (correct, 'wasting' is a participle here, which shows the ongoing activity. It means: I saw him, wasting (his) time.)

Note: The difference between a gerund and a participle will be discussed after the participle.

(g) The perfect gerund (having worked, having spoken, etc.):

SAMPURAN ENGLISH

This can be used instead of the present form of the gerund (working, speaking, etc.) when we are referring to a past action.

Ex- He was accused of deserting his ship. OR

Ex- He was accused of having deserted his ship.

The perfect gerund is fairly usual after the verb 'deny'.

Ex- He denied having been there.

Otherwise the present form is more commonly used.

Ex- He denied being there.

(h) The passive gerund:

Present: being written, being spoken, being worked

Past: having been written, having been spoken, having been worked

Ex- He was punished by being sent to bed without dinner.

Ex- I remember being taken to Paris as a small child.

Ex- The safe showed no signs of having been touched.

Ex- He didn't remember having worked there.

(i) The verb 'Mind' (means to object):

The verb 'mind' is mainly used in interrogative and negative sentences.

Ex- Would you mind waiting a moment?

Ex- I don't mind waiting/walking/sitting.

It can be followed directly by a gerund, or by a noun/pronoun or possessive adjective + gerund.

Ex- I don't mind living here. (I live here and I don't object to it.)

Ex- I don't mind his living here. (I don't object to his living here.)

Ex- He didn't mind leaving home. (He left home quite happily.)

'Would you mind' is one of the most usual ways of making a request.

Ex- Would you mind not smoking here? (Please don't smoke here.)

Ex- Would you mind moving your car? (Please move your car.)

Note the change of meaning when a possessive adjective precedes the gerund.

Ex- Would you mind my moving your car? (Would you object if I moved your car?, this is not a request, it's a polite query. A request is when we ask someone to do something.)

Ex- Do you mind if I move your car? (It's a possible alternative to 'Would you mind my moving your car?', but, 'Do you mind my moving your car?' means that the actions has already started.)

Also note that the verb 'mind' (to object) can never be followed by an infinitive.

3. Participle

A participle is a form of a verb that ends with 'ing', 'ed', 'en', 't'. A participle is a non-finite verb form that has some of the characteristics and functions of both verbs and adjectives. A participle shows 'an action in progress'.

(a) Participle is used both as a verb (progressive/continuous) and an adjective.

Present form of the verb (v1)	Past form of the verb (v2)	Past participle (v3)	Present participle (v1 + ing) = v4	Perfect participle (having + v3)
Write	Wrote	Written	Writing	Having written
Play	Played	Played	Playing	Having played
Burn	Burnt	Burnt	Burning	Having burnt

Ex- She is playing. (playing = present participle, verb)

Ex- They are playing cricket. (playing = present participle, verb)

Ex- Cricket is being played by them. (played = past participle, verb)

Ex- He has completed his task. (completed = past participle, verb)

Ex- Having taken his breakfast, he went to his school. (having taken = perfect participle)

Ex- The road was blocked. (blocked = past participle, verb)

Ex- She returned disappointed. (disappointed = past participle, adjective)

Ex- We found a candle burning. (burning = present participle, verb)

Ex- We found a burnt candle. (burnt = past participle, adjective)

Ex- A burning candle was found. (burning = present participle, adjective)

(b) Past Participle is used as the passive voice of the present participle. It is also used to make perfect participles.

Example (Active/Passive)	Meaning (Active/Passive)	Form of the Participle
A burning candle	= That is burning (Active)	Adjective
A burnt paper	= That is burnt (Passive)	Adjective
Having burnt paper	= After burning paper (Active)	Verb
Having been burnt	= After burning paper (Passive)	Verb
An infuriating woman	= Who is angry or annoying (Active)	Adjective
An infuriated woman	= Someone made her angry (Passive)	Adjective
The burning train	= That is burning (Active)	Adjective
He is playing	= Ongoing activity (Active)	Verb
He has played	= Completed action (Active)	Verb

(c) Present Participle (verb + ing) clauses can be used without a subject pronoun and an auxiliary when the subject of the sentence does two things at the same time or when one action interrupts another.

SAMPURAN ENGLISH

Join: Official Telegram Channel

Ex- I was sitting on the sofa. I was watching TV. = I was sitting on the sofa watching TV.
(Two actions at the same time)

Ex- I was running for the bus. I fell over. (One action interrupted by another) = I fell over running for the bus. (running = ongoing action)

Present Participle can be used to explain why someone did something. In this case, the participle clause usually comes first.

Ex- I fell asleep on the train because I was exhausted. = Being exhausted I fell asleep on the train.

Ex- He started to run because I saw the bus come round the corner. = Seeing the bus come round the corner he started to run.

Another use of the Present Participle is in a shortened form of an active relative clause:

Ex- Is that Ravi who is knocking at the door? = Is that Ravi knocking at the door?

Ex- Do you know the man who is talking to your mother? = Do you know the man talking to your mother?

(d) Past participle (verb-ed) clauses can be used without a subject pronoun and auxiliary in shortened forms of passive relative clauses.

Ex- The dog hit by the car wasn't hurt. = The dog that was hit by the car wasn't hurt.

Ex- The gold stolen in the robbery was never recovered. = The gold that was stolen in the robbery was never recovered.

(e) Perfect Participles (having + v3): If you are talking about two actions that happen one after the other, you can use a perfect participle for the first one. You can use a comma between the actions if you like.

Ex- We missed the bus. We decided to drive into town. = Having missed the bus, we decided to drive into town.

Ex- We finished the cake. We started on the cheese. = Having finished the cake we started on the cheese.

Note: The same meaning can also be expressed with 'after + present participle'.

Ex- We missed the bus. We decided to drive into town. = After missing the bus we decided to drive into town.

Ex- We finished the cake. We started on the cheese. = After finishing the cake, we started on the cheese.

(f) Hanging participles: Be careful when using present participle clauses that the subjects of the clauses are the same.

Ex- Walking down the street the trees looked beautiful in the autumn sun.

SAMPURAN ENGLISH

In this sentence we expect the participle clause: 'Walking down the street' to have the same subject as the main clause: the trees looked beautiful The subject is 'the trees' and obviously 'the trees' weren't walking down the street! The meaning of this sentence is better expressed in this example:

Ex- Walking down the street, I noticed the trees looking beautiful in the autumn sun.

(g) Present Participle: indicates an action that happens simultaneously with the action in the main clause.

Ex- I saw Jack while he was parking in front of his house.

Ex- I saw Jack (while) parking in front of his house.

➤ Present Participle: indicates an action that happens just before the action in the main clause.

Ex- After/when he entered the room, he caught us sleeping.

Ex- Entering the room, he caught us sleeping.

Note: The subject of the participle clause and the main clause cannot be different.

Ex- After/when he entered the room, everybody stood up.

➤ Present Participle: gives information about 'time', 'reason' and 'results'.

Note: Participle clause doesn't indicate a specific tense; instead, we should look at the main clause to understand it.

Ex- Driving on the highway, one must be careful. (present participle, present tense)

Ex- Driving on the highway, he had an accident. (present participle, past tense)

Ex- Driving on the highway, you will see a big sign. (present participle, future tense)

Present Participle indicating 'Time':

Ex- Opening the door, she saw me. (when she opened the door)

Note: Instead of using the verb alone, we can also use the prepositions "on and upon" in the same way.

Ex- On/upon opening the door, she saw me.

Present Participle indication 'Reason & Result':

Ex- Having lots of work to do, Tom didn't want to come with us. (because he had lots of work to do...)

Ex- Being rare, diamonds are very precious. (because diamonds are rare...)

Ex- Not wanting to tell the truth, the young boy made up an excuse.

(h) Past Participle: Contrary to popular misuse, a past participle doesn't have a past meaning; but instead, it has a similar usage to present participle but in passive form.

Ex- The new night club which is located on the beach side, attracts the attention of all ages. = Located on the beach side, the new night club attracts the attention of all ages.

(i) Perfect Participle: indicates an action that happens long before the action in the main clause.

Ex- After he had spent ten years in Italy, he could speak Italian fluently. = Having spent ten years in Italy, he could speak Italian fluently.

Ex- Because Tom had attended this course before, he knew what to expect. = Having attended this course before, Tom knew what to expect.

Note: to get passive form in perfect participle, we add "been" after "having".

Ex- Because he had been fired, he didn't attend the meeting. = Having been fired, he didn't attend the meeting.

Ex- Because he hadn't been invited to the wedding, he didn't come. = Not having been invited to the wedding, he didn't come.

Note: The difference between a gerund and a participle: Gerund is a kind of noun. Participle is a verb/adjective (which shows an action in progress).

Ex- I saw him smoking in the corner. ('smoking' = participle)

Ex- Smoking is injurious to health. (smoking = gerund)

Ex- I'm tired of being sorry. (being = gerund)

Ex- I saw him working late last night. (working = participle)
